The Permare Group has expanded its production with the creation of the new Amer 116. The project will offer the buyer a high-quality product, both from a structural point of view and in terms of material selection. The 116 is designed to provide excellent sea-keeping features, thanks to the planing hull, which allows to combine hull power and gentle wake-response.

A further feature is the possibility to choose a mixed engine solution instead of the more traditional shaft/propellers ones, ensuring in both cases the use of only one engine during long cruises. The use of structural tanks, located longitudinally within the hull, is a significant element ensuring safety and an incredible navigation range.

Great attention has been paid to the insulation of the engine room, as well as to onboard comfort and performances.

The cooperation with Verme Projects for the development of exterior styling/engineering and the contribution of Architect Stefano Tini for the interiors make this boat a very refined product.
